Tesla Model Y vs. Volkswagen ID.4: Features

While it's true that the Tesla Model Y has grabbed headlines due to its high-tech features like autopilot mode, these enhancements will set you back quite a bit. If you'd like to add the Full Self-Driving Capability to your Model Y, you'll need to tack on an additional $12,000! That puts the Tesla Model Y in the range of $70,000 to $75,000 to secure the features you want most. Instead, you can opt for the Volkswagen ID.4 to score the amenities you need without sacrificing your budget:

- ID. Light: This unique feature runs the length of your dashboard offering audio and visual cues to alert you of everything from incoming calls to the status of your charging.
- Intuitive Start: When you have your ID.4 key fob on your person, the 12-inch touchscreen will automatically cue up for your convenience.
- IQ.DRIVE: This innovative suite of assistance and safety features serves as your de facto co-pilot as you traverse through city streets. Offering Adaptive Cruise Control (ACC) and an Active Blind Spot Monitor, you'll be filled with confidence behind the wheel of the ID.4.

Tesla Model Y vs. Volkswagen ID.4: Charging

An important point for any EV owner is charging times and efficiency. Luckily, when you compare the VW ID.4 vs. Model Y, you'll discover that both options deliver impressive driving ranges, power, and charging times. With the Volkswagen, however, you can look forward to savings that go beyond the attractive sticker price.

The 2022 Volkswagen ID.4 is offered with 3 years of included 30-minute charging sessions from the date of vehicle purchase. You can charge up at Electrify America DC Fast Charging Stations at no additional cost!
